PANAMA (AP)-Panama's government said Sunday it has captured three members of an invasion force that landed on the Caribbean coast of this jittery Central American country. Other members of the rebel band have been spotted by a government plane, the announcement said.

Army patrols intensified their search in the isolated east coast region but reported no contact with the main rebel group of 50 to 60 men who landed late Friday

Minister of Government Jose Dominador Bazan said passports showed two of the captured men were Cubans. The third was Panamanian. Bazan quoted persons living near the landing spot as saying several invaders told them the rebel force had come from Cuba with encouragement from Prime Minister Fidel Castro, Cuba's revolutionary leader. Bazan said there was no confirtaly's famed Leaning Tower of Pisa, whose defiance of the laws of gravity has been keeping the world in suspense for nearly 800 years, may really be in trouble.

Top story of tower contains the bells. Visitors climb iron rungs to window to get better view of the city of Pisa below.

For most of the last 50 years experts have been giving the 179-foot tower another 300 years before falling, but now, some maintain, it will topple before the year 2000. Their reason: the rate of incline has been increased at an alarming rate in the past few years. In 1958, the rate had increased to .046 inches as compared to an average .027 in the years before.

To keep its incline stable, the tower since 1907 has been given periodic concrete injections around its base, but they haven't appeared to help much. Prof. Giovanni Boaga, Rome scientist, has the support of many who claim the only solution is to dismantle the tower, sink a concrete slab about 40 feet deep and rebuild the tower over it. But the tower would be rebuilt with a modest lean, otherwise it would lose its attraction. And attract it does. Each year some 200,000 tourists admire it.

Construction of the tower began in 1174. It was completed in 1350. The ground beneath the tower started to sink after the first three stories were built. The tower began to lean, and kept on leaning until it was $16\frac{1}{2}$ feet out of line. It has tipped one foot during the last 100 years alone.

Now scientists study the tower anxiously while tourists, quite unaware of what is happening, climb the winding stairs for a breathtaking view of the city of Pisa below.

Italian scientist, Prof. Carlo Vallini, studies tower's inclinometer which measures precise degree of tower's constantly changing incline.

The International Traffic In Words

Russians have no word in their language that describes rowdies so accurately as the English word "hooligan" and so they borrowed it. Because of the lack of an aspirate the word in Russian becomes "gooligan."

There is a commerce in words that jumps frontiers and trade barriers and angers those watchdogs who stand on guard to keep languages free from foreign contamination. Their efforts

Foreign words usually enter a language as unwelcome guests and stay on to enjoy unquestioned respectability. "Bungalow," to describe a one-floor house, was borrowed from Hindustani. If "veranda" had not been borrowed from the same source "stoop" (stoep) would be heard more often. It came from the South African Dutch.

There are few nations more language-proud than the French. They have injected English with a host of words it would be difficult to get along without. A bride might nave a wardrobe, but would it be quite so satisfying as a trousseau? And where would the car be put if not in the garage? Whether one dines in a restaurant, cafe or hotel, the French named these places of gastronomic pleasure.

Now the word-traffic is traveling in the opposite direction at a greater pace. According to the New York Herald-Tribune, English words and expressions have become the fashion in Paris. The Office of French Vocabulary has sprung to arms in defense of the purity of the language which has for so long been slyly admitting some of its deficiencies by borrowing from abroad.

The peripatetic Englishman long ago accustomed French chefs to "bifteck," while "gongster" was imported years ago.

Defenders of the French vocabulary may do their best or their worst. Their efforts are doomed from the start.

These Days

By George E. Sokolsky The Tyranny Of Words

There is a paragraph in Pasternak's "Doctor Zhivago' that might be passed over by the swift and casual reader as so much Russian introspection. But there is meaning to it. Words are not only used to express thought but also to confuse minds. We become accustomed to a word and it takes on a variety of meanings. Which is the correct meaning? Which truly describes what we want to say? Pasternak in the paragraph which I shall quote is striking a blow at the peculiarities of human thinking when food becomes the objective remote problem of alimentation and, of course, everybody starves. I quote Pasternak:

"This was the time to prepare for the cold weather, to store up food and wood. But in those days of the triumph of materialism, matter had become a disembodied idea, and the problems of alimentation and fuel supply took the place of food and firewood.'

How skillfully Pasternak satirizes the bureaucratic way of making everything complex and difficult; in fact, impossible. I lived in Petrograd during the days he describes in Moscow. We had no food but if one still had money, he could get champagne. Somehow, those who sold wine were anxious, at first, to get the old Czarist rubles which were really worth nothing. But they had confidence in that which had lost value because somehow the Czar's face on money seemed still important to those who were about to murder the Czar and all his family.

People do believe what they want to believe as long as they can get a word for it. Such words as "segregation" and "integration" are presumed to have tions of the skin, scalp, and nails specific meaning just as "democracy" is supposed to have specific meaning. Actually, it is a boorish trick to ask anyone to define such terms with workable precision because usually they do not know what they are talking about. They "feel" that they are right: they "sense" that they know what they mean. But analysis produces only the evidence that words can be tyrants; that they can seize a man's mind and hold it, as though in a vise, until he can no longer think.

The other day, a taxi-driver who said he was a minister of Jehovah's Witnesses told me that I was doomed. Yes, he said, all you pagans are doomed. I could not let that go by, so I thought that I would tell him that I was a Buddhist and see what came of that. Without turning his head to see if I looked like a Buddhist, he only muttered, "Doomed!"

It was like a letter I received from a reader denouncing Cyrus Eaton for being a Jew. He is quite unhappy about it. Of course, Cyrus Eaton is not a Jew and never was, but in the mind of this unfortunate reader, he must be a Jew because the reader does not like Eaton and he does not like Jews. Ergo!

Words are very queer instruments because they so often give a false twist to an idea. For years, I have protested against the legalistic statement that the Communists want to "overthrow the government by force and violence." That is an unprovable statement.

What can be established without any doubt whatsoever is that in every country the Communists wish and plan to take over the government by any means whatsoever, including force and violence. It would be silly to overthrow a government if it is possible to take control of that government by normal political methods.

The lack of precision in language is characteristic of this particular era, which people call the atomic age and some the space age. These terms, I cannot fathom at all. Splitting or fusing atoms has in no manner actually changed our lives yet. Somebody gets excited and says we are in the atomic age and everybody is supposed to say so. But what does the phrase actually mean? What has the atomic explosion done to change the character of human beings? Even the frightened scientists who invented the monster have not had their lives changed by what they are doing.

Some people use queer words to identify themselves. A psychoanalyst will speak of the id; a beatnik talks of a pad; a bureaucrat talks gobbledygook. What does it all prove?

What Do Doctors Recommend?

Lausche Proves He Hasn't Profited From Office: Pearson Apologizes

WASHINGTON - The other day I drew some mean inferences regarding the activities of Sen. Frank Lausche of Ohio which I now want to take back. I called attention to the fact that Lausche, in between terms as Governor of Ohio, had served as attorney for the New York Central Railroad, and later when reelected Governor, put across a heavy axle tax on trucks; also that he sat on a Senate subcommittee recently which voted to let the railroads discontinue suburban trains regardless of prohibitions by state governments.

Senator Lausche has now done an unusual thing. He has let me see his financial records, and I am convinced that although he dic legislate as reported above, he did so from conviction, and was not influenced by his brief period as counsel for the Federation of Railway Progress.

Senator Lausche was Governor of Ohio longer than any other man in history. He left office probably as poor as any other governor in history. I have frequently commented that honest public servants seldom accumulate much in the way of worldly goods, and scrutiny of Senator Lausche's books certainly bears this out. Most of his money is in U.S. Government bonds. As Governor of Ohio he was urging state empioyes to buy bonds and so he himself bought a $100 bond, later a $200 bond, each month. It was deducted from his salary as Governor. He thus accumulated By Drew Pearson $17,900 in U.S. bonds, but had to sell $10,000 of them to buy a house in Washington. He has a mortgage of $17,624 on that house.

The Senator also bought nine shares of Bank of America stock in 1956 for $315 a share, plus 20 shares of stock in the Cincinnati Enquirer for $10 each, when it was being purchased by its employes and others interested in continuing newspaper competition in Cincinnati. The total value of these stocks is now estimated at $4,545. He also has some insurance in a Slovenian insurance company in Cleveland, but hardly enough to mention.

This is a pitifully small amount of worldly wealth for a man to acquire after serving as city judge, mayor of Cleveland, and five times Governor of Ohio. It's the wealth of one who must sincerely believe that the place to lay up treasures is in heaven, "where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt.

I should also report that Senator Lausche has set up no law office either in Washington or Ohio. He is living entirely on his government salary, plus around $200-a-month pension from the state of Ohio. I came away from talking to him and looking at his books with the feeling that Lausche was really trying to live up to the Shakespeare quotation I read on his wall:

"This above all: To thine own self be true. And it must follow as the night the day, thou canst not then be false to any man."

Note-Sen. Steve Young has also bared his investments, which makes a clean score for Ohio Senators in disclosing any influences which might affect their voting.

Mr. Sam's Word

a big test on bossism shortly. He is due for a showdown with courtly Congressman Howard Smith of Virginia, who looks like Sherlock Holmes and specializes in blocking housing bills inside his Rules Committee. Smith is now sitting on the $2 billion housing bill, and if Mr. Sam doesn't make good his promise to blast the bill out of Smith's committee he'll have some very rebellious Congressmen to cope with.

Last January, when Rep. Chet Holifield of California appealed to Rayburn to end bossism by committee chairmen, Holifield wrote down a statement in Rayburn's office which he asked the Speaker to read. Sam read it and agreed -namely, that if Smith of Virginia bottled up any more bills, Rayburn would join Holifield and others in upsetting Smith's throttle-hold on vital legislation. Now it's up to Sam to carry out his pledge, and this reporter can report that Sam always keeps

Inside fact is that Sam would have moved earlier except for one thing. Last week was a Jewish holiday, which meant that about 50 big-city Congressmen were absent. Sam wanted those big-city votes around to back him in voting for the housing bill.

Mr. Dulles' Figs Vice President Nixon, addressing the American Society of Newspaper Editors, told of lunching recently with John Foster Dulles who ate sparingly of cottage cheese and from a box of fresh figs which had just been flown in from California. "I remarked that Mrs. Nixon loves figs," Nixon told the editors, "and that evening the doorbell rang and there was Mr. Dulles' chauffeur with a box of figs. Three had been removed, but "the others he had thoughtfully sent to Mrs. Nixon." After the speech, Nixon asked one of the leading editors, Jack Knight of the Knight newspapers, whether he was wise in telling the fig story.

"Not to that sophisticated audience," advised Knight. "I'd save that one for Lafayette, Ind."

Knight's advice was sound. For the fig story has been told several times in Washington. Just a few days before, Walter Rob-Good old Sam Rayburn faces ertson, Assistant Secretary of State, was telling friends how he was lunching with Secretary Dulles and had admired his fresh find a basis for Western unity that will be strong enough to withstand all sorts of Soviet nerve-war pressures in the forthcoming negotiations. It is lamentable, but it is a fact, that there are still undecided differences about the right negotiating approach among the Western allies. Most important, there is a difference between the Germans, French, and Americans, on the one hand, and the British on the other. The British wish to open the negotiations with the Soviets by offering concessions, to show good will; and they argue that a revision of the status of Berlin is positively desirable The other allies hold that it is a mistake to open any bargainingsession by offering concessions, which will only be taken as the prelude to further concessions.

The difference is really about tactics more than about substance; but it is an important difference all the same, since it of recriminations later on, if and when the Soviet nerve-war pressure grows serious. Fortunately, there is every reason to hope that Herter will find some way to resolve this inter-Allied difference, when he meets with the other Western foreign ministers before the talks with the Soviets at Geneva. The International Traffic In Words

Russians have no word in their language that describes rowdies so accurately as the English word "hooligan" and so they borrowed it. Because of the lack of an aspirate the word in Russian becomes "gooligan."

There is a commerce in words that jumps frontiers and trade barriers and angers those watchdogs who stand on guard to keep languages free from foreign contamination. Their efforts

Foreign words usually enter a language as unwelcome guests and stay on to enjoy unquestioned respectability. "Bungalow," to describe a one-floor house, was borrowed from Hindustani, If "veranda" had not been borrowed from the same source "stoop" (stoep) would be heard more often. It came from the South African Dutch.

There are few nations more language-proud than the French. They have injected English with a host of words it would be difficult to get along without. A bride might nave a wardrobe, but would it be quite so satisfying as a trousseau? And where would the car be put if not in the garage? Whether one dines in a restaurant, cafe or hotel, the French named these places of gastronomic pleasure.

Now the word-traffic is traveling in the opposite direction at a greater pace. According to the New York Herald-Tribune, English words and expressions have become the fashion in Paris. The Office of French Vocabulary has sprung to arms in defense of the purity of the language which has for so long been slyly admitting some of its deficiencies by borrowing from abroad.

The peripatetic Englishman long ago accustomed French chefs to "bifteck," while "gongster" was imported years ago.

Defenders of the French vocabulary may do their best or their worst. Their efforts are doomed from the start.

These Days

By George E. Sokolsky The Tyranny Of Words

There is a paragraph in Pasternak's "Doctor Zhivago" that might be passed over by the swift and casual reader as so much Russian introspection. But there is meaning to it. Words are not only used to express thought but also to confuse minds. We become accustomed to a word and it takes on a variety of meanings. Which is the correct meaning? Which truly describes what we want to say? Pasternak in the paragraph which I shall quote is striking a blow at the peculiarities of human thinking when food becomes the objective remote problem of alimentation and, of course, everybody starves. I quote Pasternak:

"This was the time to prepare for the cold weather, to store up food and wood. But in those days of the triumph of materialism, matter had become a disembodied idea, and the problems of alimentation and fuel supply took the place of food

How skillfully Pasternak satirizes the bureaucratic way of making everything complex and difficult; in fact, impossible. I lived in Petrograd during the days he describes in Moscow. We had no food but if one still had money, he could get champagne. Somehow, those who sold wine were anxious, at first, to get the old Czarist rubles which were really worth nothing. But they had confidence in that which had lost value because somehow the Czar's face on money seemed still important to those who were about to murder the Czar and all his family.

People do believe what they want to believe as long as they can get a word for it. Such words as "segregation" and "integration" are presumed to have specific meaning just as "democracy" is supposed to have specific meaning. Actually, it is a boorish trick to ask anyone to define such terms with workable precision because usually they do not know what they are talking about. They "feel" that they are right; they "sense" that they know what they mean. But analysis produces only the evidence that words can be tyrants; that they can seize a man's mind and hold it, as though in a vise, until he can no longer think.

The other day, a taxi-driver who said he was a minister of Jehovah's Witnesses told me that I was doomed. Yes, he said, all you pagans are doomed. I could not let that go by, so I thought that I would tell him that I was a Buddhist and see what came of that. Without turning his head to see if I looked like a Buddhist, he only muttered,

It was like a letter I received from a reader denouncing Cyrus Eaton for being a Jew. He is quite unhappy about it. Of course, Cyrus Eaton is not a Jew and never was, but in the mind of this unfortunate reader, he must be a Jew because the reader does not like Eaton and he does not like Jews. Ergo!

Words are very queer instruments because they so often give a false twist to an idea. For years, I have protested against the legalistic statement that the Communists want to "overthrow the government by force and violence." That is an unprovable statement.

What can be established without any doubt whatsoever is that in every country the Communists wish and plan to take over the government by any means whatsoever, including force and violence. It would be silly to overthrow a government if it is possible to take control of that government by normal political methods.

The lack of precision in language is characteristic of this particular era, which people call the atomic age and some the space age. These terms, I cannot fathom at all. Splitting or fusing atoms has in no manner actually changed our lives yet. Somebody gets excited and says we are in the atomic age and everybody is supposed to say so. But what does the phrase actually mean? What has the atomic explosion done to change the character of human beings? Even the frightened scientists who invented the monster have not had their lives changed by what they are doing. Some people use queer words to identify themselves. A psychoanalyst will speak of the id; a beatnik talks of a pad; a bureaucrat talks gobbledygook. What does it all prove?

What Do Doctors Recommend?

Lausche Proves He Hasn't Profited From Office: Pearson Apologizes

WASHINGTON - The other day I drew some mean inferences regarding the activities of Sen. Frank Lausche of Ohio which I now want to take back. I called attention to the fact that Lausche, in between terms as Governor of Ohio, had served as attorney for the New York Central Railroad, and later when reelected Governor, put across a heavy axle tax on trucks; also that he sat on a Senate subcommittee recently which voted to let the railroads discontinue suburban trains regardless of prohibitions by state governments.

Senator Lausche has now done an unusual thing. He has let me see his financial records, and I am convinced that although he dic legislate as reported above, he did so from conviction, and was not influenced by his brief period as counsel for the Federation of Railway Progress.

Senator Lausche was Governor of Ohio longer than any other man in history. He left office probably as poor as any other governor in history. I have frequently commented that honest public servants seldom accumulate much in the way of worldly goods, and scrutiny of Senator Lausche's books certainly bears this out.

Most of his money is in U.S. Government bonds. As Governor of Ohio he was urging state empioyes to buy bonds and so he himself bought a $100 bond, later a $200 bond, each month. It was deducted from his salary as Governor. He thus accumulated

NEW YORK (AP)-The Baltimore Orioles swept both ends of a doubleheader from the New York Yankees Sunday, 5-4 and 3-2. with third baseman Brooks Robinson driving in the winning run in the opener and scoring the tie-breaking run in the nightcap.

The two victories, their third and fourth straight over the defending champions, boosted the second place Orioles to within one game of the league-leading Cleveland Indians. The double loss dropped the Yankees into the second division with a 6-7 record. Win Both In Ninth

Baltimore won both games with ninth inning rallies. Trailing 4-3 in the opener, they scored twice on singles by Jim Finigan and Robinson after Gene Woodling had singled and Chico Carrasquel had walked. Whitey Ford, who had entered the game in the ninth to protect a one-run lead, was the vic-

750 Patrons See Track Accident

As Auto Skids

A 42-year-old official at the Potomac Valley Speedway in Fort Ashby was killed yesterday afternoon when he was struck by one of the speeding stock cars during a 10-lap race.

Albert Pete Gatto Sr., Baltimore Pike, died en route to Memorial Hospital, where he was brought by a Fort Ashby Volunteer Fire Company ambulance.

Dr. Thomas Lusby, Cumberland physician who was attending the races, said the victim lived for several minutes after he was struck by the car while standing at the edge of the infield of the one-third-mile track.

He was pronounced dead of a crushed chest, multiple fractures and other injuries by Dr. Lusby, who accompanied the man in the ambulance. Track officials said the accident occurred during the second lap of the second race of the afternoon at about 2:30 p.m.

The stock can was driven by Kenneth Jeffries, about 30, of Lonaconing, they said.

Car Skids Leaving Turn

The car skidded coming around the turn into the straightaway in tempted to straighten it out.

Mr. Gatto, acting as flagman during the race, was standing near the finish line on the track infield. As the car veered toward him, Mr. Gatto attempted to jump out of the way but was struck by the speeding car.

750 Patrons See Track Accident

A 42-year-old official at the Potomac Valley Speedway in Fort Ashby was killed yesterday afternoon when he was struck by one of the speeding stock cars during a 10-lap race.

Albert Pete Gatto Sr., Baltimore Pike, died en route to Memorial Hospital, where he was brought by a Fort Ashby Volunteer Fire Company ambulance.

Dr. Thomas Lusby, Cumberland physician who was attending the races, said the victim lived for several minutes after he was struck by the car while standing at the edge of the infield of the one-third-mile track.

He was pronounced dead of a crushed chest, multiple fractures and other injuries by Dr. Lusby, who accompanied the man in the ambulance.

Track officials said the accident occurred during the second lap of the second race of the afternoon at about 2:30 p.m.

The stock car was driven by Kenneth Jeffries, about 30, Lonaconing, they said.

Car Skids Leaving Turn

The car skidded coming around the turn into the straightaway in front of the grandstand and veertempted to straighten it out.

Mr. Gatto, acting as flagman during the race, was standing near the finish line on the track infield. As the car veered toward him, Mr. Gatto attempted to jump out of the way but was struck by the speeding car.
